CAPITAL CHILDREN

HIGHLY DEVELOPED

OFFSPRING OF DOCTORS HAVE HIGHEST RATING

Three Perfect Juveniles Found Here and All Three Have Doctors for Fathers.

Miss Mary R. Campbell, director of the Laboratory of Child Study, at Hygiene Hall, yesterday announced her deductions derived from studying some fifty Washington children. "While I can make no definitely final assertions as yet," said Miss Campbell, "yesterday, at the same time the evidence would seem to show that the standard of mental development among Washington children here is higher than throughout the country as a whole. Of the fifty children so far examined, only one has failed to pass the Binet-Simon test of mental capacity. While most of the children are shown to be far in advance of their years mentally."

"However, I still have some 125 children to examine, and further investigation may lead me to alter my present opinion, but just now I would rank the Washington school child as superior in brain power to the average American of the same age."

"I have also made another discovery from my examination of these Washington boys and girls; and this is that the children of physicians are mentally and physically superior, as a rule, to the children of those following other occupations."

"I am inclined to believe that the reason for this lies in the greater knowledge which the physician possesses of the proper manner of bringing up a child and to the more skilled pre-natal attention which the unborn child receives in the physician's home. So far, only the children of men physicians have been examined."

"I am now in search of some women physicians' children, for if my theory is correct, it would be further established by showing that the offspring of women who themselves know medicine are even further advanced than the children of women who are merely physicians' wives. At any rate, my work has shown that the growth in mental and physical vigor, for the average human being, is directly conditioned upon the advantages it has in infancy; and that a progressive advancement in the care taken of children may lead to a progressive advancement in human efficiency."

Geniuses Snuffed Out.

"Probably twenty geniuses are snuffed out to-day to every one who finally brings his message to the race. With proper attention every one of these geniuses could be developed to the full, and who can measure the discoveries in science and invention, the immortal literature, and the general increase in well-being which would accrue to humanity with twenty times as many geniuses at work as we now have? For these and similar reasons the conclusions derived from my examination of Washington children so far impel me to believe that child-welfare work is the greatest necessity of the race to-day."

Miss Campbell said that so far she had found three physically perfect children in Washington, and "significant enough," she added, "every one of them is the child of a physician." The children are Farrer Goldberger, five, son of Dr. Joseph Goldberger, Katherine Scherewsky, daughter of Dr. J. W. Scherewsky, and the eight-year-old boy of Dr. John Anderson, of the Public Health Service.

The most brilliant child so far examined is nine-year-old Eleanor King, daughter of Dr. W. F. King, Assistant Secretary of the Indiana State Board of Health. Although this child is only nine years old, mentally she checks up to fourteen, which means that as far as brain goes she is practically grown up. Physically, also, Eleanor King is up to the average.
